Togane City

The city of Togane, where JIU is located, is approximately 50km from central Tokyo. With a population of around 60,000, this modern city is known for its winter strawberry cultivation through a network of greenhouses around the city.

Historically, Togane can trace its origins back to the beginning of the 17th century (Edo era) when it was a staging point and acted as an inn town on a main road, or highway, which has become the backbone of the city’s modern development. This highway known as the Onari Kaido was built by orders of the first Shogun of the Tokugawa Shogunate, Ieyasu Tokugawa, who used it primarily for hunting trips. Under his order 350 years ago some 39 cedar trees were planted in Togane, and even today these trees can still be enjoyed as a reminder of the city’s important historic role.
